Young local gymnast to compete in nationals in Florida

by Michael Krawczak

By day, 14-year-old Brianna Ebbert is an unassuming eighth-grade student at Carlton Oaks school in Santee. After school and on weekends, she's a champion gymnast, likely to be found either in training or off traveling to yet another competition. This weekend (May 1-4), Brianna will be at Disney world, making her second trip to the nationals.

Ebbert earned this trip with a solid performance in Santa Barbara at the regionals on April 12. In a field of 50 Level 10 competitors representing the best of California, Nevada, Arizona and Utah, she took top honors on the balance beam and finished no lower than sixth in the competition's other three events – floor exercise, uneven bars and vaulting – for an overall fifth place finish.

The top 12 finishers qualified for the nationals, with the top six comprising the region's "A team." She will compete against gymnasts from the nation's seven other regions.

Except for an 18-month-long hiatus about two years ago, young Ebbert has been training in gymnast programs since age 4. She's now with the San Diego State University Aztec program and longtime coach Darla Franz, devoting 23 hours a week, year-round to honing her skills.

Of the 250 young gymnasts now training in the Aztec program, only Ebbert qualified for nationals. One teammate is standing by as a third alternate.

The gymnastics competition season runs from January through May, but the demanding training regimen goes on year-round. Following her leave-of- absence from the sport, it took her about six months of dedicated training to regain her previous skill level.

In gymnastics, competition begins in Level 5. Through Level 7, events are compulsories, where everyone performs the same moves. At Level 8 and above, individual degree of difficulty becomes a factor in scoring. Gymnasts can advance to higher levels based upon their marks from judges at competitions. As a Level 10, Ebbert is at the last step below gymnastic's highest level, Elite, which is the level of Olympic athletes. She is hopeful of ascending to that top level this year.

As a young Level 10 three years ago, she competed in the nationals in Pennsylvania. While she finished in the top 10 overall and qualified for the finals, she injured herself while warming up and was unable to compete further.

"I love the competition and traveling," Ebbert declared. Competitive travel has taken her as far as Montreal. This weekend in Florida, she'll be accompanied by her grandmother and Franz.

Young Brianna Ebbert shows some of the form on the balance beam that gave her a chance to compete in the gymnastic nationals at Disney World in Florida this weekend.

A gymnastics coach for 30 years, Franz believes than the youngster stands a good chance on the balance beam and floor exercise routines at this nationals.

"She's one of the hardest working kids I've ever had," Franz declared. He added that she's doing it for herself, seeking to dispel the negative stereotype of young gymnasts being driven by overbearing adults.

Franz stresses the self discipline the sport instills, and can readily tick off a list of former students who have gone on to fulfilling and successful adult professional careers.

She noted that the young gymnasts in the Aztec program are working their little tushes off to be the best they can be in life.

Ebbert concurs with the discipline aspect, noting, "It's helped me have respect for adults."

Franz also noted the commitment and support required by family members in getting the young gymnasts to practice.

Franz recalled a special competition where Ebbert's mother and nine siblings all showed up to cheer her on.and paid $2 per person admission, just to see her compete.

While Ebbert allows herself passing thoughts of an Olympic future, her immediate goals are more down-to-earth and definitely within her grasp.

She expects to attend West Hills High School this fall and pursue gymnastics there, while working toward her primary goal of achieving a college scholarship. The 1997 nationals should put her one more step closer to that goal.

Team KIDS entertain Polinsky Children's Center residents

by Joe Naiman

At this time of the year, race car drivers and crews are working on their cars or, if it happens to be the weekend of the Indianapolis 500, the U.S. 500 or the Coca-Cola 600, they would be watching the races on TV.

This year, on the Sunday before the Cajon Speedway opened with the Southwest Tour, about a dozen members of the local racing community volunteered their time to entertain residents at the Polinsky Children's Center, bringing happiness to the residents of the children's shelter.

Cajon Speedway racers like Ivan Harrison, John Tyczki, Jr., Aaron Loney, Jody Lockmann and Carol Kirby Williams were among the drivers who, along with their cars and several crew members, took part in the events Team KIDS held at the center.

Last year, Lockmann was unable to attend the Memorial Day event due to illness, but still arranged for her car to be at the children's center.

Track owner Earle Brucker Jr. and his wife were present last year along with the cookies Mrs. Brucker baked; this year the Bruckers had another commitment, but Marilyn Brucker's cookies still reached the kids.

Former off-road racer Tom Minga demonstrated his snake-handling interest and Tyczki, the general manager of Chaperone Auto Body in Clairemont Mesa, arranged for the donation of Polaroid film, allowing the children to be pictured sitting in the race cars or with one of Minga's reptiles.

Other attractions included llama rides, a jump and a train ride by Pacific Crest Llamas, clowns who performed face painting and dogs courtesy of Operation Greyhound.

Harrison is the founder of Team KIDS, an acronym which stands for Kindness In Direct Sponsorship. Harrison founded the group nine years ago out of disgust with charities which spent more money on salaries and other administrative activities than on the recipients.

Team KIDS founder Ivan Harrison

The Polinsky Children's Center is the only recipient of Team KIDS' efforts. Some of the money is used for full-day parties such as the March 23 events.

Contributions are also used for Christmas presents, trees and other related items. Team KIDS has also donated two golf carts to the Children's Center.

Volunteer efforts are perhaps the donation which has the strongest impact on the children. "We try to have one of these events every year about this time," said Harrison.

All of the 1996 volunteers returned for the 1997 event, just as they did in 1996.

Minga, who won the Baja 500 in 1988, acknowledged that he was missing three auto races on television. "I had so much fun here last year. These kids are so great. I had to."

Because the 1996 Baja 500 race was six days after the Team KIDS event, the local off-road racers were unable to provide vehicles, but Minga provided an iguana, three boa constrictors, three rosy boas and a python.

Tyczki wasn't at all reluctant either, although he noted that in 1995 he had to walk away five times because of overwhelming emotions regarding the treatment of the children prior to their placement in the center.

Although Tyczki, who has a 4-year-old boy, found it hard to comprehend how anybody could mistreat a child, he found it easy to interact with the children themselves. He said that life's good for him and felt he should do something back for these kids.

Pony Stocks driver Aaron Loney gave a similar reason for leaving his Santee home to spend part of a major weekend at the center.

The speedway arranges for donations from Palomar Mountain Spring Water and Crest Beverages, and a special rate for Chipwich sandwiches.

In response to the children's enjoyment of the Pacific Crest Llamas train, Earle Brucker has also promised to donate a train whistle, sold at the Cajon Speedway on the nights of train races, for the next event.

Workers at the center have provided feedback to Team KIDS and have noted that the children remember the people even more than the race cars and animals.

Team KIDS has worked with the center for about five years. The center, which has about 85 children, was formerly the Hillcrest Receiving Home and moved to its Clairemont location in October 1994.

Alzheimer's Association Golf Classic scheduled

The Alzheimer's Association of San Diego is holding its 12th Annual Golf Tournament on May 12 at Singing Hills Country Club in El Cajon.

"We're expecting this year's event to be the best yet, and urge novice and scratch golfers alike to come out and golf for a good cause" said Tom Schultz, tournament chairman. "All proceeds raised will directly benefit San Diego Alzheimer's victims and their families."

Tee-off for the four-person scramble is scheduled to begin at noon-both groups and individuals are welcome to sign up. Pre-event activities will include putting practice, lunch and cocktails. Immediately following the tournament will be a sit-down prime rib dinner, raffle and awards ceremony. Raffle prizes include Las Vegas weekend getaways, dinner for two at local restaurants and golf equipment.

Awards will be given for the top five scores, closest to the pin, longest drive and worst score. Last year's best score went to brothers Steve and Richard Dawson of El Cajon.

"Last year, the tournament raised $35,000 for the San Diego chapter of the Alzheimer's Association," said Ron Hendrix, executive director. "Our goal for this year's event is to gross $40,000. We hope to see supporters from past years, as well as new faces at this year's golf classic."

The cost is $195 per participant, which includes pre-and post-event activities, including lunch, golf shirt, prizes and banquet, as well as tournament entry fee. Funds raised will benefit San Diego Alzheimer's victims and their families. For more information, call 537-5040.

Free girls golf clinic at Singing Hills on May 10

by Norrie West

A clinic of free instruction for girls 7 to 15 will be held Saturday, May 10, from 2:30 to 4 p.m. at Singing Hills Country Club driving range.

Clinic director Pat Ferrante, head professional at Mission Bay Golf Resort, said that girls will be taught the basic fundamentals by her, by another LPGA pro, Heidi Duback Richardson, and by PGA pros.

Each participant will receive one Cobra golf club and a Ping golf ball, Ferrante said.

To sign up girls can call 280-8505, the junior golf office.

There are other clinics also – April 26 at Torrey Pines Driving Range and May 3 and May 17 at Mission Bay Golf Course.

These clinics are free and girls can sign up for them also. The clinic is jointly sponsored by Cobra Golf, the local chapters of the PGA and the LPGA and the San Diego Junior Golf Association.

Hello again, and I won't wait to get to this week's rant, folks. Just what is going on in this country?! This whole Fuzzy Zoeller situation has me madder than a red hen (and if you've ever seen a red hen, then you know just what I'm talking about). First, he makes a really dumb comment about Tiger Woods and fried chicken and collard greens (hey, Bill Clinton and Newt Gingrich make stupid remarks all the time), then he apologized. End of story? I think not. Then, he apologized again! Not content with that, the sleazy lowlifes at Kmart pulled his endorsed products off the market (two words for you, "Wal-Mart"), and then he was forced to drop out of last week's greater Greensboro Open.

Friends, this politically-correct garbage has gone far enough. Zoeller makes one bad joke, and loses everything; O.J. Simpson's praised as a hero in the black community. We're going nuts, people! And, if you asked me, if I'd rather have something said about me, or one of my family members – just call me a "fat, white, Kraut" all you want. Put it in the papers, broadcast it on TV, I don't care. And why hasn't Isaiah Thomas, who said, "Larry Bird was only in the NBA because he was white," and Charles Barkley, who once claimed to "hate all white people," ever called on the carpet for their racist views? And what about Louis Farrakhan?

Besides, if telling an unfunny joke was a crime, Jay Leno, David Letterman, Ted Danson and thousands of "comedians" would be doing hard time in the crowbar motel, that's for sure. Okay, okay, I'm fine now. Thanks for listening.

Now on to some local sports activity to calm us all down. Word is that Caroline Medlock, a tennis player at Grossmont Community College, has been selected as a Pacific Coast Conference Athlete of the Week. Her finals victory over teammate, Julia Lygina (6-2, 6-2), gave her the PCC singles title for 1997.

Grossmont High School graduate Greg Clark has announced that he will transfer from Long Beach State to the University of Washington. "I wanted to enroll in a Pac-10 school because of the academic opportunities, and Washington is a great place to start," said the 6-foot-7 cager.

Lemon Grove's Darrell Russell, who attended St. Augustine High School and USC, will now be making more money than all of us combined. Why? Because the defensive lineman was the second pick in the first round of the recently-concluded NFL amateur draft. He was grabbed by the Oakland Raiders, which means, that when the two teams play each other at the Murph, yours truly will be there for a story and photos. Oh yes, I will. The only other two East County players to be taken in the first round were RB Tommy Vardell (Granite Hills) by Cleveland in 1992, and quarterback Mark Malone (El Cajon Valley) by Pittsburgh in 1980.

Robert Pheasant, a junior catcher for the Christian Patriots baseball squad, has been chosen as one of the Union-Tribune's Athletes of the Month for March. He was the team's leading hitter with a .517 average, had 21 RBI, scored 11 runs and swiped five bases. On the defensive side, he has thrown out 8-of-13 baserunners.

A funny thing happened to the Gulls on the way to their celebration last Monday night. Seems the team, which had just won its second straight Taylor Cup title (via a four game sweep of the Anchorage Aces), and the players were just a bit "too exuberant," shall we say, in how they were making merry. Oh, let's just say it! There were three sheets to the wind! Okay?! Anyway, they also ended up breaking the Taylor Cup! Don't ask me how, or why ...

On the Padres' front, dropping two-out-of-three to St. Louis in Hawaii, and two more humiliating defeats at the hands of Houston, have the fans wondering just what is going on. Not to mention that they were robbed blind in the Irabu deal; losing him and several top prospects, just to get two injured minor leaguers and three million dollars. Most of the sportswriters we talked to at last Wednesday's game were in total agreement with me on this point.

Well, my time and space are up for this week, but I still need your input. Call me at 390-7103 with any sport-related news or events and, if you give me about a week in advance, I'll put it right here. I promise. Until then, have a great sports-related-type week.
